CREATE A LEGACY

You can structure a bequest in numerous ways, as you can give:

- A specific dollar amount or a percentage of your estate;
- The remainder of your estate after other obligations are met; or
- A contingent bequest should one or more of your beneficiaries not survive you.

Please consult with your financial advisor or attorney when making a charitable bequest to ensure that all your objectives are met.

THANK YOU FOR SUPPORTING OUR WORK!

Making us aware of your bequest is optional, but very helpful. Doing so allows us to acknowledge your generosity and recognize you as a member of our Walter Cronkite Legacy Society, a group of dedicated supporters who have also included Interfaith Alliance in their estate plans. Informing us also helps us better plan for the future.

We know that you care about Interfaith Alliance, and we hope you will continue supporting our important work well into the future. Among the opportunities for giving we hope you will consider is a charitable bequest in your will. This estate-planning option is a simple way to enhance your legacy and help us protect faith and freedom in the years to come. Here’s why making a charitable bequest may be the perfect giving option for you:

You can accommodate multiple giving priorities. A bequest can be made as a percentage of your estate, so you can ensure that your loved ones and favorite causes benefit in relative proportion. Interfaith Alliance can also be named as a contingent beneficiary – meaning the needs of surviving beneficiaries come first.

You have security. A bequest allows you to balance your charitable giving wishes with your current needs. Because you aren’t parting with your assets today, you don’t need to worry that you’ll run into financial difficulties in the future as a result of your gift.

You can change your mind at any time. We understand that circumstances change, and your gift to us in your will may no longer be possible in the future.

Your estate can receive tax benefits. In addition to the heartfelt satisfaction that comes with giving, making a bequest to a charity can provide tax benefits to your estate.
